Selected Press and Reviews

Without finger-pointing, even in an era of political and social turmoil, this engrossing documentary explores implicit bias and its effects on all walks of life, including the workplace and law enforcement arenas. The film makes a strong case that although we are all wired in some way to have bias, we have the ability to do something to change it.

- David Lewis, San Francisco Chronicle, September 13th, 2018

San Francisco Chronicle

Bias is a crucial, powerful exposé of ourselves. The film righteously demands our close attention to its topic. For those who comply with this opportunity to learn, it will catalyze shifts of thoughts, minds, and, especially, behaviors.

- Don Schwartz, Cinesource Magazine, November 13th, 2018

The best part about the bias screening was watching its impact on the team members. So many parts of the film seemed surprising, yet rung true and helped people internalize some of their own biases. The screening provided me, as a leader, with a unique way to help people truly understand how bias impacts our interactions and work everyday.

- Kelly Kay, Executive Vice President & CFO, Toyota Research Institute

My head just exploded. And it's so important for people to be out there challenging our thought processes right now. Now I'm looking to change the experiences that I have so I can change my more narrow views.

- Randall Kenneth Jones, The Jones Show, November 8th, 2018
